Dated August 1st, 1861.

Dated August 1st, 1861.

FRANCIS GILES and CO., in making the above amounteement, beg to express their thanks for the favour which has been shown their Establishment since its commencement, and to state that no effort will be spared in the future to render it worthy of the leading position in which the leading of flucies, have placed it.

The remarkable increase of business which has attended that period, since the opening of Deuison House, has rendered it importative on the proprietors to make increased effort to suppond to the requirements of their numerous patrona, and has induced them to make preparations for the prelays meason on a more extended and magnificent scale that lithrate. In order to ficilitate operations, and to be able always to present to their customers a nice selection of new and seasonable goods, they have permanently adopted a system of semi-annual asles, for the purpose of clearing their stock at the end of each season, and preventing the accumulation of old and unseasonable goods. This system, commenced last autumn, they are determined to carry out for the full benefit of their customers; and although the reduction of price necessary to ensure the clearance of each season's stock entails a loss on the firm, yet the advantage derived from greater considence and estimated to their customers, and the relief of their assistants from the obligation which is otherwise too often formed on them, of introducing old goods as new, more than compensaies for the loss of profit. As the reputation of many of the leading Lendon houses has been erected on a strict afherence to this policy, Mesers, F. G. and Co. have ample guarantee of its eventual success, and the increased confidence the announcement of their permanent adaption of it will inspire amongst their customers.

or it will inspire amongst their customers.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

CULTIVATION OF COTION IN THE COLONIES.

ON the 28th of May, Lord Brougham, seeing the moble Duke the Colonial Minister in his place, said he wished to call his attention to a matter which, in his opinion, was at the present moment one of the greatest possible importance; he referred to the growth of cotton in our various colonial possessions. He would abstain from referring to one part of the subject, because it would lead him, however unwilling, to make some observations on that very painful state of things existing in the United States of America. He considered that it had become absolutely essential, independently of those events in America, that her Majesty's Government should promote by every means in their power the growth of this great staple, and he would fain urge upon his noble friend to lose no time in recommending the different colonial Governments to encourage by all means in their power the growth of this article. He had received from Jamaica samples of cotton, and they had been submitted to persons of known skill in this country, who had pronounced them to be the finest sorts they had seen, and they had fixed the price so high as to show that the cultivation of cotton would most clearly be remunerative after paying all the expenses. It was said that this cotton would in the market be worth 1s. per 1b.; but even if it should not be worth more than 60, per 1b., yet as they could upon one acre of land in Jamaica grow 600 lbs. in weight, that would realise £15. He was assured that the planters might grow 600 lbs. an acre easily, and he had been furnished with all the items relating both to the cultivation of cotton and to the expenses attending it, and he found that all the expenses would not exceed £8 an acre. There could be no doubt whatever that with due encouragement cotton might be grown to an unlimited extent in our colonial possessions, not only in Articabut in the Kast Indies, sudde-looked for ward with conditionantly.

The Duke of Newcastle reminded the noble lord that he had forgotten the r indence to the time when those countries would be capable of furnishing the supply necessary to this country.

The Duke of Newcastle reminded the noble lord that he had forgotten the rule which was generally followed, that when a question was to be put some notice should be given, in order that a more satisfactory and correct answer might be obtained than could be made under existing circumstances. He would not complain in the present instance, for he could at once assure the noble lord that her Majesty's Government had not neglected this most important question. The real difficulty in the matter was not so much as regarded the growth of cotton, either in a district or a colony, as the amount of labour necessary to that end, and the price of that labour. The noble lord had alluded to the island of Jamaica, and had stated that it was capable of producing a large quantity of cotton; but he (the Duke of Newcastle) was by no means clear that Jamacia could produce so large a quuntity. The noble lord had asked him whether the Government was prepared to offer any encourgement for the growth of cotton. Now, if he meant encouragement of a pecuniary description, he would at once say that the Government could not do anything which would be so prejudicial to the interests of the colonies referred to. If the statement of the noble lord, that cotton which could be grown for £8 could be sold for £15, being nearly 100 per cent, profit, was correct, he thought a great many Jamaica proprietors would be very glad to grow cotton. But he was afraid the statement could not be correct. There was at present an impediment to the introduction of coolie labour into the West India Islands, and her Majesty's Government desired that the present restrictions, so far as they regarded that the present restrictions, so far as they regarded that the present restrictions, so far as they regarded the submitted would be able to introduce soolie labour into the West India Islands, and her Majesty's Government desired that the present restrictions, s introduce coolie labour into Jaimaica, and try the experiment of the growth of cotton there. (Hear, hear.)

After a few words in reply from Lord Brougham, to the effect that he should not approve of any encouragement of a pecuniary nature being given to the colonies or to the cotton growers, the subject dropped.

On the Slat of May Mr. Adderley asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether the bill passed by the New Zealand legislature for constituting a native council differing, in its relation to the colonial Government, from the bill of last session, had received her Majesty's assent and confirmation.

Mr. C. Portescue said the Colonial Secretary had announced in another place that he had invited Sir (1. Grey to place his services at the disposal of the Government as the Governor of New Zealand. His duty would be to bring to a conclusion, if possible, the unhappy war now raging, and, in the second place, to consider the whole question of native administration, putting it, if he could, upon a better footing for the future. Under these circumstances the Government, wishing to leave Sir G. Grey free to deal with these questions, did not think it their duty at present to sanction the bill alluded to by the honourable gentleman, but would review the whole question when it was reported upon by Sir G. Grey.

Distant of Court Cavour; and, having peased a high eulogium upon the character of the deceased statesman, expressed a hope that some step might be taken on the part of the House to testify its seeme of the loss which Italy and Europe had sustained.

sense of the loss which Italy and Europe had sustaised.

Lord John Russaell bore testimony to the statesmanifile qualities of Caunt Cavour, and declard emphatically that there never was a man who had devoted himself more—heart, mind, and soul—to his country than the late Prime Minister of Italy.

The O'Donoghue expressed his dissent from the observations of the hon, baronet and the noble lord, and observed that Count Cavour had persistently misrepresented the condition of the States of the Church in order to aggrandise the power of Sardinia. His policy, directed as it was to the abolition of the temporal power of the Pope, was a gross outrage upon the most sacred feelings of the great majority of Christians in Europe, and he (The Donoghue) felt bound to say that he saw the finger of God in his death.

death.

Mr. Monekton Milnes reproved the hon member for Tipperary for the unguarded expressions, which he attributed to his zeal for the maintenance of the he attributed to his zeal for the maintenance of the Holy See.

Lord l'almerston pronounced an eloquent panegyric upon the distinguished qualities of Count Cavour, and referred to the claims which he had on the gratitude and attachment of his fellow-countrymen. He had laid the foundation of improvements—social, moral, political, and material—which would long survive him, and which would entail inestimable advantages upon the country over the destinies of which he had exercised so powerful an influence. It might well be said of him that he had lived a life—To point a seral and adon a tale, and though his death was premature, it could not be said that he died too roon for his glory or his fame.

The Case of Mr. Barbers.

On June 11th, Mr. Brady moved that the strong claims of Mr. Barber upon the favourable consideration of the Crown, referred to in the report of the select committee on the petition of William Henry Barber, made upon the 7th day of Mills mhenry Barber, made upon the 7th day of Mills mhenry berber to the total chaims, are entitled to the consideration of her Majesty's Government. He asked a further sum of $3700, the expenses attendant on Barber's restoration to the roll of attorneys.

Sit G. Grey objected to the motion on the ground that claims of the kind, when once considered and settled, ought not to be re-opened. No grounds had been shown for again demanding further pecuniary compensation in a case which stood alone in the circumstances of a failure of justice.

Mr. F. Kelly having warmly supported the motion, The Chancellor of the Exchequer said that the cumstances of a failure of justice.

Mr. F. Kelly having warmly supported the motion.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said that the decision of the House ought not to turn on the question of the amount of money—which had been called contemptible—but the question was one of re-opening the matter, and thereby perhaps inviting another demand at some future time. Besides which, the principle of improperly convicted persons, whose innocence had been established, receiving pecuniary compensation from the State was most objectionable and mayed.

Mr. Longfield opposed the motion, observing that on the whole Mr. Barber had been tolerably fortunate in his martyrdom.

After some discussion,
Mr. Brady officed to withdraw the motion, but it was negatived without a division.

NEW KIALAND,

was negatived without a division.

On the 21st of June, Mr. Adderley naked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether, now that the retellion in New Zealand was suppressed, the Government were taking such steps as would tend to extricate the country from any future implication in native policy; and whether they would now advise her Majesty to give assent to the Native Council Bill sent by the New Zealand Legislature for her spproval.

Mr. Fortescue said he could not give any other answer than that he gave before, viz., that a new Governer of New Zealand, Sir George Grey, had been appointed, and that instructions had been given to him to consider the whole subject of the administration of the colony and report to her Majesty's Government. Under those circumstances it would be very wrong at the present mement to give any assent to the Nature Council Bill.

BETHAING PENSIONS TO GOVERNORS OF COLONIES.
On the same day Colonel French asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether it had been determined by the Government to grant retiring pensions to governors of colonies; and, if se, after what period of service, and on what scale.

Mr. Fortescue said this question was considered by the Government of Lord Derby, who came to a decision against it. Her Majesty's Government had not given any consideration to the subject.

THE STATE UF SOUTH CAROLINA: MONARCHICAL LONGINGS OF THE SECESSIONISTS.

FROM LEFTER IN THE "THESS" AV ITS SPECIAL CORPHSTONISTS, "AV ITS SPECIAL CORPHSTONISTS, "WHE RESELL."

NOTHING I could say can be worth one fact which has forced intell upon my mind in reference to the ecutiments which prevail among them for several days. I have visited their plantations, I have conversed with them freely and fully, and I have enjoyed that frank, courteous, and graceful intercourse which constitutes an irresistible charm of their society. From all quarters has come to my east the school of the same voice: it may be feigned, but there is no discord in the note, and it sounds in wonderful strength and monotony all over the country. Shades of George III, of North, of Johnson, of all who contended against the great rebellion which tore these colonies from England, can you heavt the chorus which rings through the State of Marion, Sumter, and Pickney, and not clapy your ghostly hands in triumph? That voice says." If we could only get one of the Royal race of England to rule over us, we should be content." Let there be no misconception on this point. That sentiment, varied in a hundred ways, has been repeated to me over and over again. There is a general admission that the means to such an end are wanting, and that the desire cannot be gratified. But the admiration for monarchical institutions on the English model, for privileged classes, and for a landed aristocracy and genity, is undisquised and apparently genuine. With the pride of having achieved their independence is mingled in the South Carolinians' hearts a strange regret at the result and consequences, and many are they who "would go back to morrow if we could." An intense affection for the British connexion, a love of British habits and customs, a respect for British sentiment, law, authority, order, civilization, and literature, premiuncly distinguish the inhabitants of this State, who, glorying in their descent from ancient families on the tribe should be premiuncly di atoms of composite empires; but they are all mere indifference and neutrality of feeling compared to the animosity evinced by "gentry" of South Carolina for the "rabble of the North."

The contests of Cavalier and Roundhead, of Vendean and Republicas, even of Orangeman and Croppy, have been elegant joustings, regulated by the finest rules of chivalry, compared with those which North and South will carry on it their deeds support their words. "I Immorath hate, the study of revenge" will actuate every blow, and never in the history of the world, pernaps, will go forth such a dreadful ere sicits as that which may be heard before the fight has begun. There is nothing in all the dark caves of human passion so cruel and deadly as the hatred the South Carolina to work steadily to organise her resources for the very life blood of the State. It has set South Carolina to work steadily to organise her resources for the struggle which she intended to provoke if it did not come in the course of time. "Incompatibility of temper" would have been sufficient ground for the divorce, and I am satisfied that there has been a deeprooted design, conceived in some men's minds thirty years ago, and extended gradually year after year to others, to break away from the Union at the very first opportunity. The North is to South Carolina a corrupt and evil thing, to which for long years she has been bound by burning chains, while monopolists and manufacturers fed on her tender limbs. She has been bound by burning chains, while monopolists and manufacturers of Abolitionism and of Filibustering, which have flooded the land. Helieve a Southern man as he believes himself, and you must regard New England and the kindred States as the birthplace of impurity of mind among men and of unchastity in women—the beame of Free Love, of Fourierism, of infidelity, of Abolitionism, of false teachings in political economy and in social life: a land saturated with the dripping of rotten philosophy, with the poisonous infections of a fanatic press; without ho the garb of philosophical abstractions to cover their nestiness in deference to a contemptible and universal hypocrisy.

Who fills the butchers' shops with large blue file. "
Assuredly the New England demon who has been persecuting the South till its intolerable cruelty and insolence forced her, in a spasm of agony, to rend her chains as under. The New Englander must have something to persecute, and has he has hunted down all his Indians, burnt all his witches, and persecuted all his opponents to the death, he invented Abolitionism as the sole resource left to him for the gratification of his favourite pussion. Next to this motive principle is his desire to make money dishonestly, trickily, meanly, and shabbilly. He has acted on it in all his relations with the South, and has cheated and plundered her in all his dealings by villainous tariffs. If one objects that the South must have been a party to this, because har boast is that her statesmen have ruled the Government of the country, you are told that the South yielded out of pure good nature. Now, however, she will have

THALY.

The French papers repeat that the Imperial Government intends immediately to renew diplomatic relations with Turin. "The renewal, however," says Lo Telsies, "would not imply, on the part of France, as regards the policy of the Italian Kingdom, any judgment on the past, or any responsibility for the future. It would show that the de facto Government of this new State is sufficiently established for it to be possible to entertain international relations with it, which the interests of the two countries imperiously demand.

possible to entertain international relations with it, which the interests of the two countries imperiously demand.

"France, by her new attitude, would not pretend to interfere in any manner in the internal or external sfairs of the Italian kingdom, which remains sole judge of its conduct, as it is master of its future and of its destinies. It would act towards it as one day the great European Powers will act in the American question, by recognising the new republic of the Southern States when that republic shall have constituted a Government on a basis which will allow international relations to be entertained with it of advantage to general interests."

This article has been received with great exultation in Rome, where it appears to be believed that the Roman question will ultimately be settled by a European congress, a few dissentients only declaring that no Sovereign of France will ever give up the control of the Papacy.

The key-note of Italian politics at the present moment is contained in the speech with which Ricasoli opened his administration:—

"We hesitate not to affirm, gentlemen, that with the immense calamity which has just befallen us, there is none of us who has bent so low under the weight of this grief as to entertain any doubt of the destinies of his native land. The vast conception of that illustrious statesman whom we deplore has not died with him, but already, when he has descended to the tomb, it has become the life and soul of this

THE BRITISH ARMY: ITS DISTRIBUTION ABROAD.

(From the Times, June 10.)

A REVER has just been laid before Parliament which, in connexion with a recent resolution of Government, suggests some curious reflections. It exhibits the numbers and composition of the several garrisons employed in the protection of British dependencies in every quarter of the globe. The immediate design of the paper was to present a view of the charges thus entailed by each colony on the Imperial Exchequer, and the information so communicated has, unquestionably, it was points of interest. We prefer, however, on this occasion to indicate another feature of the case. If ever the famous day of the New Zealander should really come, and the story of an extinct British empire be reviewed for the instruction of an Australian world, the magnitude of our possessions will not excite more astonishment than the smallness of the force by which they were retained. Dominions on which the sun never sets are held by fever troops than are probably sow assembled at Washington to protect the capital of the Union against its own citizens. It is almost ludierous to compare the strength of our garrisons with the extent of our territories. Even our purely military settlements are very slenderly furnished. There are not so many soldiers in Malta and Gibraltar together as would be quartered in a thirdrate fortress in any continental kingdom. We ought to premise that the return is made for the year ending March 31, 1850; but that was a fair period for taking the estimate. It was on New Year's Day in that year that the first note of European war was sounded;—and, though there have been displacements of troops since that time, the segregate strength of our colonial garrison has probably not been much affected. So we put the figures before the reader, and beg him to mark with how few troops an Empire may be governed.

gerison has probably not been much affected. So we put the figures before the reader, and beg him to mark with how few troops an Empire may be governed.

The first dependency on the list, and that with which our observations are most directly concerned, is British America. Half the North Americaa Gontinent pertains to the British Crown; and this dependency, so vast and so valuable, lies on the borders of a powerful and aggressive Republic. The people of the United States have often amused themselves with talk about the appropriation of Canada, and have elevated into a "doctrine" the theory that the whole continent is theirs by desting, and that, though foreign claims may be allowed to die out, they must never receive any fresh confirmation or extension. Under such circumstances, it might be fancied that our border would be bristling with bayonets, and that a colony so healthy as well as so immense would absorb an army of itself. Very different is the truth of the case. The entire garrison of Canada might be packed in a couple of steamers. A good half of all the troops quartered in the province might be comfortably accommodated in the Wellington Barracks. There are some 2000 in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, but if every soldier were taken from every North American station, and the whole force paraded in a mass, it would barely exceed 5000 men. One of these stations is Newfoundland. The last mails have informed us that even Newfoundland has its lisbilities to political disturbance. Election riots have taken place there, and the troops have been called out, as in former days they used to be at homs. What was the muster of the garrison of the garrison of piece he was expected to manage, we cannot pretend to guess; but we have now to announce that, in consequence of events which have convulsed the American Repub ic, and arrayed the millions of the North against the millions of the South it has been thought that if all America should fly to arms, marauding parties might possibly in the heat of national effervescence

Next comes Australia—a continent of itself,—for we may reckon in our dependencies one of the great divisions of the globe. In this enormous territory political prophets see a future mistress of the world, and no country in our time has taken such gigantic strides or exported such prodigious riches. Australia is returned in the paper before us under five great departments, comprising an area which we shall not attempt to measure. Its garrisons, however, are by no means beyond reach of calculation. New South Wales receives for its protection 247 British infantry and 107 artillerymen. The other provinces have as artillery, and not many foot coldiers either. Victoria has 828, with four engineers; Tasmania, 260; Bouth Australia, 116; and Westers Australia, 95. The sentire garrison of the Southern World could be easily brought home in the Himslays. Any regiment of the Line, with two battalions, could take the whole duty of the continent. New Zealand it an exceptional position. Two years ago, however, there was but a single regiment astatosed in this country of the Macories, and the force had to be atrengthened by hasty draughts from all quarters as soon as the periodical war came round again.

We now turn to our West Indian Colonies, which we may group with our smaller Kaatern dependencies and with certain islands in the North and South Adustic. The West Indias allogether draw about 4000 men from the Hoyal Army. Bermuda, being a convict station, requires a regiment to itself; there are about 500 men quartered in St. Hel-na and about 400 in the Bahamas. The Falkland is ands are held by a force of thirty-seven foot; Labuan has no Clucea's troops at all. From this point of the scale we ascend a little to the Mauritius and Ceylon, the former of which islands takes a whole battalion of infantry, and the latter a garrison of some 3400 men. At each of these stations, as also in the West Indies, there is a certain force of artillery, and Hondur-a and the Bahamas have even one engineer apiece. As to our African possessions, they are all, with the exception of the Cape, held by about 1000 men.

The reader will begin to wonder where our Colonial Service' goes on, and in what quarters all those troops are stationed the call for which so diminishes our army at home. Buffur the truth is that small sums tell up in the end, and what with Asia and the rest to the Septimion of the Osep, held the service of the service of the warm of the service of a south of the service of the Armstrong Guns,—A series of interesting experiments were carried out during last week at Shobutyness, in presence of numerous members of the Ordnance Select Committee, and the recently appointed fron-plate Committee, Sir W. Armstrong, &c., for the purpose of fully testing the po wer of the old smooth bore and the new rifled guns, against the strongest combination of iron plates and timber yet experimented on. It will be seen from the following official detail that the result of the experiments was entirely conclusive as to the immense superiority of rifled ordnance. The battery or target consisted of a solid iron wall ten inches thick, built up on Thorney-croft's system of dovetailing, and this was backed in the strongest manner by heavy timber, and braced with iron bars. The first attack was made with heavy guns, 68-pounders, of the old service pattern, but the various projectiles fired by these amount hour guns made no perceptible impression, and it was evident that the battery would stand any amount of pounding from these weapons; in fact, after all the ammunition expended, the wall of iron and timber appeared to be, for all precincal purposes, indestructible. One of the Armstrong 120 saunt guns was then placed in position, and fired with a projectile weighing 126 lb. The extraordinary power of the weapon was instantly apparent. Such was the effect of the firing of the mass, combined with its velocity, that at a range of 600 yards it cleaned out one of the 10-inch plates, at the same time carrying away the back support. The next gun hied was one of the ordinary 100 pounder Armstrong, with a solid projectile, weighing 110 lb. The battery was struck in another part, and a breach was made clean through the structure, the fabric resili being so waskened as to ensure ultimate destruction. The third, shot, with the same weight of projectile, was directed agai of their brief history. All the countries of the world are newly opened, and all the currents of population set flowing here and there, where a vacuum is to be filled an accumulation discharged, or a channel to be found. Under these circumstances, neither cotton nor any other cultivation will be tied to one spot. It will follow labour, capital, and enterprise. After what we have seen of its growth in the States, in Egypt, and even in India, we will not venture to say where next it will establish itself.

the transept to the other side. Then Blondin stepped backwards on to the rope from the west side of the transept, and proceeded thus to retrace his steps towards the east with the utmost case. When he had walked about one-fourth of the entire distance he stood on one leg, threw his body forward, and balanced himself in a graceful attitude, extending his heavy balance-pole, as though it were a light wand. Advancing to the centre, he again stood on one leg, took off his plume of ostrich feathers, and waved it over his head as freely and as gaily as though he were on the ground. He then sat sideways and then astride the rope, and rose with apparent ease on one leg, on which he poised himself for some time. Advancing a little further, he stopped and knelt on the rope, sat down, and turned a somerault. After this he lay with spparent unconcern on his back, placed his balance-poly under his head, and, slowly raising his legs, turned a somerault, with his head resting on the pole, came down astride on the rope, then, hastily jumping up, ran along to the west stage.

and on the pole, came down astance on the rope, hastily jumping up, ran along to the west e.

Blondin was next blindfelded, and a canvas bag put over his head reaching to his knees, and che had only space for the arms to come through, which his feet for the rope, and was again on his. He had not advanced a dozen pace, however, in his left foot slipped, and plunged downwards; body swayed over, and hundreds of eyes were ted from what threatened to be instant death, nothing of the sort—s tilt of the pole brought up again; a few steps further, and the right foot ped off, causing the most painful apprehension: danger was again past, and yet a third time a fall and imminent. At length the spectators began to sive that these feints were purposely introduced M. Blondin, and with ftelings of very much inished terror they watched him proceed on his ase steadily as if he were walking on broad plank a few inches above the and. Groping about with his feet, he more got upon the rope, proceeding backda until he reached the centre, when he sat down lay upon his back, and, incumpered as he was the sack, and with his eyes still bandaged, he led a somersault. He then removed the can with his cap, into the transept. More somersaults weed, and finally the performer ran nimbly up to stage. M. Blondin's success was complete, and he audience broke up the universal verdict was the performance was the most extraordinary and ting of the kind that had ever been witnessed in don.

as the audience broke up the universal verdici was that the performance was the most extraordinary and exciting of the kind that had ever been witnessed in London.

M. Blondin was attired in a tightly-fitting dress of light colour, ornamented with beads, and with a large cap bedecked, like the headgear of a Red Indian, with a prodigal profusion of gay feathers, and looked taller than he actually is, being a man below the middle height. He is a model of muscular compactness and symmetry. If his whole notive power had been a system of flexible steel machinery moved by clockwork, there could not be greater precision and certainty in his movements. To complete this personal sketch it may be added that he is about forty years of age, that his features are regular and pleasing, and his complexion fair, and that he wears no whiskers, but a light moustache and beard.

Blondin has since given a private performance on a short rope in the terrace dining-room of the Crystal Palace. The performance was chiefly undertaken to show the astounding feats which Blondin can with ease accomplish on a tight-rope, and that, therefore, the solicitude which is expressed for his safety when going through simple evolutions on the rope across the transept is really only so much good sympathy thrown away. The rope was a snort but very tight one, stretched over treaties after the usual manner, some ten feet from the ground. To walk on a tillte is in itself a matter of some difficulty, but to walk on a rope with them and turn back summersaults, slighting on the cord, is something that would have been thought a physical impossibility if Blondin had not done it on Friday with them most perfect case, and almost with perfect indifference. Then, taking a common four-legged chair, Blondin balanced its legs cornerwise on the rope, and seating himself upon it, moved in it from side to side, as if lounging, stood upon it, climbed over its back, and even edged it by jerks along the cord, without missing a note of music. In like manner, with a drum, wh

MONDAY, AUGUST 19, 1861.

Ir our readers will refer to the Police reports of Tuesday last, they will see that John Boyn was charged with having entered his house, bolted the door, knocked down his wife by a blow in boyn his wife by a such an extent that her legs and side and back bore the marks of violence, and that he coutinued to do so after her cries had br neighbours to the door. For this he was sentenced to be imprisoned seven days, and to give sureties to keep the peace for twelve

On the following day, the Police report records that Thomas JESSIMOND answered to the charge of JANE HUGHES that he entered her house, struck her in the face, and, upon her resistance, seized her by the hair, or three times. For this offence he was sen tenced to pay forty shillings, with costs, or to be imprisoned seven days.

On Thursday it is recorded James Jackson was charged by a constable with having assaulted a woman named Gardner by kicking her as she lay upon the ground, for attempting to interfere between him and another person fighting. The woman did not appear, but the magistrates sentenced the offender to be kept to hard labour for one calendar month.

On Friday, our Police report states that FRANCIS JACKSON was bound over to keep the peace towards his wife : whom he threatened "to smash:" he had formerly struck a blow which lamed her for ten weeks, and a short time back gave her a black eye. He had bought a revolver, and she was afraid for her life. Hearing his sentence he went into a fit, was released at the entreaty of his wife, who will no released at the entreaty of his wife, who was addoubt be duly recompensed for her compassion.

These four cases of woman-beating were successive days at the Police tried on four successive uses a mode court. In looking over the list we find only one Court. In looking over the list we find only one record of assault made upon men. We may therefore infer that the masculine puglistic propensities are chiefly exercised in knocking down women, and otherwise maltreating them. Men probably would resist these attacks upon them by sufficient retaliation, but women, whatever spirit they may possess, are not endowed by nature with the fighting capacity.

The next remarkable fact is that the beating appears to be in severity in proportion to the nearness of the relationship. The wife-beater for instance, exhibits greater ferocity than the mere woman-beater. The very fact that he lives in a free country entitles him in his view to this species of indulgence! Men may object, perhaps, to their wives being beaten by others, although one of these worthies stood by and allowed the assault without opposition! But when a man exhibits his pugilistic prowess upon his wife he can do so without such reserve. Thus, while the stranger received a blow in the face and a kick, the wife was covered with bruises.

The distribution of penalties is not less worthy of consideration. The man who struck worthy of consideration. The man who struck a woman trying to prevent a fight, but against whom she herself made no accusation, was condemned by the magistrate to one month's hard labour. TESSIMOND, whose assault seems to have been of a very unprovoked and most violent nature, was ordered to pay a penalty of forty shillings, with costs marked upon the arms, legs, side, and back, a days' imprisonment!

Thus in propertion to the moral outrage an

Thus in propertion to the moral outrage and physical violence—in proportion to the claim for protection—the scale of punishment is diminished. In one instance the assault is punished by a fine, which to men of spirit would be small compared with the iuxury of knocking down and kicking a woman.

We are perfectly aware that in the administration of the law the magistrates have before them facts which may modify their conclusion and regulate the sentence, but punishments so light for conduct so detestable is a diagrace to the community. Does any one believe that were women the lawmakers and magistrates they would value at the same rate the most atrecious injuries done them per-sonally as well as the indignity offered to their sex? If a poor wretch steals sixpence all the apparatus of the law is put in motion to crush him, but these scoundrels march out of court with a sentence so light as to leave in their with a sentence so light as to leave in their minds nothing but projects of future vengeance, and encourage all of similar habits to repeat these atrocities. We beg the magistrates to believe that there is a third party in addition to the woman bruiser and the woman bruised. There is the public which is insulted and outraged by these constantly repeated and most unmanly offences. The punishment for all cases of assault is most capricious, and often ridiculous. The most capricious, and often ridiculous. The suffering and injury remains with the victim, and not with the scoundrel by whose hands the outrage has been perpetrated. England demanded a law to pay woman-beaters in their own coin: and, opposed as we are to corporeal punishments, because degrading to humanity, they certainly, if defensible at all, would be so as an appropriate penalty for offences which place the perpetrators out of for offences which place the perpetrators out of the pale of manhood. The physical consequences of assaults are The physical consequences of assaults are not appreciable by magistrates. They often leave suffering which never is cured. Often they destroy life itself. That very act which, if its results were rapid, would send a secondrel to the gallows, only sends the beaten woman to the grave. If the object of punishment is to prevent crime, and if crime is to be estimated not by its instantaneous effects, but he its next like and consequences are deby its possible and remote consequences, we do not know upon what kind of logic the miserable larceny rogue is sent to a penal settlement while the ferocious woman-beater goes scotfree or with the payment of a few shillings, or the inconvenience of a few days' imprisonment.

THE BANK RETURNS.

THE official abstracts of the banking transactions within the colony of New South Wales, during the quarter ended the 30th June, 1861, compared with those of several preceding quarters, exhibit the subjoined results.

No. 1.—Notes in Circulation.

The note circulation has again declined, being the second quarter showing a decrease.

The heaviest diminution of deposits is again with the Bank of New South Wales. In March there was a decrease of £191,800, or twelve per cent : there is now the still more per cent.

On the other hand, the Oriental, which is March had increased its deposits by £80,200, nearly thirteen per cent. has now increased them further by £94,200, nearly fifteen per cent. The English has increased within a fraction of thirty-one per cent.

The deposits without interest, in comparison with those bearing interest, in the last three Junes, are shown below.

The two classes are now nearly on a par But the ratio of deposits without interest is two per cent. higher than it was a year ago.

In none of the banks, however, are posits at interest equal in amount to those without interest, except the English and the Oriental, and in them the interest-bearing are in high preponderance. For example-

No. 3.-Coin. During the six menths ending with March, the aggregate coin had been diminishing; it has now rallied.

Damage to Ballway Caritades.—A number of carriages and break vans for the Grest Southern and Western Railways were ordered from England a few months ago, and are now being landed from various ships from Loudon and Liverpool. Unfortunately, every one of the carriages has, on the case being opened, been found in a damaged condition. Although the carriages were secured with tarpaulin and deuble cases, the water has penerrated them, and has thoroughly soaked and rotted the cuchinus, almost entirely destroying both the horsonsir and the cloth covering, and removing the varnishing. The total number of carriages ordered was fifty-one; of these thirty-six are third-cleas, and fifteen are what at either end being fitted up with seats all round as a first-class carriage, and those at either end being arranged for second-class passengers. Fifteen carriages consisting of both classes have been landed from the ships Resolute, Marcianus, Bard of Avon, and Nagasaki, and every one of them is found to be seriously injured in the manner referred to. The cause of the injury has been no doubt the extraordinarily boisterous weather which all the recently arrived Raglish ships report having met with, and it is found to the seriously injured in the manner referred to. The cause of the Injury has been no doubt the extraordinarily boisterous weather which all the recently arrived Raglish ships report having met with, and it is found to the seriously injured in the manner of the carriages being much required for the traffic. The carriages were manufactured by Messra. Wright and Co, of Birmingham, and are of a very superior description, the third-class carriages being made with sloping backs, whick will be a great comfort to passengers. The vexation caused by the damaged state of the carriages is aggravated by the circumstance that their freight is enonmously in excess of that previously charged, the expense of bringing them from attention was been bestowed upon the Act, and voluminous evidence has been taken from many highly qualified witnesses. The administrative working of the office has been closely gone into, and all the principal officers of the establishment have been examined in reference to their duties. The result is that many amendments in the law, and some in the working of the establishment have been suggested, and a new bill has been prepared, which is now in the hands of the Government printer. When this bill is returned to the Commission they will proceed with its final consideration, and no doubt will soon, therefore, agree to their report. We cannot, of courte, at present indicate the nature of anylof the changes recommended or suggested; our present remarks are simply intended—in answer to several enquiries—to satisfy the public that although the Commission have not yet reported, they have not needlessly delayed the investigation entrusted to them, but have, on the contrary, been actively and continuously engaged in their wer. The Acricultural Scient's Prizes.—Saturday's Mercury says:—We were favoured yearerday by Mr. Osborne, the secretary of the Hunter River Agricultural and Horticultural Association, with a sight of the silver medals which are now being distributed amongst the successful competitors to whom they were awarded at the late Exhibition. They are of elegant design, well carried out, and will doubtless be highly prized. Each medal consists of a centre of burnished silver, about an inch in diameter, and convex on both sides. The centre is surrounded by a wreath of vine lesves, which with the stalks and tendrils are wrought in dead or frosted silver. On the one side of the centre is engraved an inscription, surmounted by the letters H. R. A. & H. A., beneath which are the name of the prize was awarded, and the date, 1861. On the other side is engraved a representation of the exhibit which won the prize, as, for instance, a blood colt, a draught horse, a built calf, Nr. These figures are engraved with much spirit and fidelity to nature, the characteristics of each class being discernible at a glance, without reference to the inscription.

Suppen Death—An inquest was held by Mr. Reids, Cubhert v, Taylor.

FLOOD IN PORT STEPHENA.—Under date of the 12th instant a correspondent writes:—This district flas again been visited by a flood as disastrous in its consequences as any that has preceded it, destroying a great quantity of the young wheat; and in many instances washing away the soil it was growing on. The rain commenced on the morning of Tuesday, the 8th instant, continuing heavier through Wedesaday, with every appearance of a flood. The waters rose on Wednesday night, overflowing all the low lands in the vicinity of the township. During the night the flood in the tributary creeks had reached its highest point, and on daybreak on Taureday was found to have fallen slightly; but the creek continued rising, and did rot reach its culminating point until noon, when it was twenty-five feet above its ordinary height, and from four to ten feet deep on a number of the low farms. The waters, however, subsided almost as rapidly as they rose; and on Sunday night all the farms were once more visible. The weather has again cleared up, and traffic, which was stopped by the floods, will be resumed throughout the district.

MINSIGNARITA IN. APRICA.—Detailed and distressing intelligence had been received at the Cape of the misfortunes of the Makoloto missionaries. The Rev. Mr. Price, and several native members of the expedition, perished in quick succession there is now to great reason to feer, not from the fever of the Zambeai, but from the insidious poisson of the Makoloto chief. Their treatment otherwise was also altogether barbarous. Some ment otherwise was also altogether to direct the substantion of the lays to the Cape was looked forward to with much interest.—Represe.

THE OPERA.—On Saturday evening, Balfu's pretty pers, "The Bohemian Girl," was produced before a risudience, and, it is scarcely necessary to state, stwith a good reception. The singing and acting I Madame Escott, as Arline, was excellent, and unity so was that of Mr. Squires, as Thaddeus, and is Hodson, as the Gipsy Queen. Mr. Lyster superied the role of Count Arniem, and Mr. F. Howson appeared in his old character of Devilshoof. The galty change of opera evince the resources of this supany. All the members are thoroughly acquainted th their relative parts, though the illness of Mr. squiharson has, of course, rendered an alteration the cast of each opera necessary, which involves an distinual study of the bease music, if not a deviation om the score usually allotted to that gentleman, his evening Donizetti's "Lucrezia Horgia" will be him performed.

Du ano —A correspondent writes, under date 1st August, that the weather at Dubbo was very unsatisfactory, the rain falling heavily for some days, and the rivers being bank-high.—Several cases had been disposed of at Petty Sessions. John Riley, charged with the sealing and killing a sheep belonging to Mr. Charles Corish, on the 13th May. The evidence was partly taken and the hearing postponed to the next court day, defendant being admitted to bail, in consequence of the lock-up being deemed unfit as a place of confinement. Some other cases of minor importance were also disposed of.

The Wrahher.—The Singleton correspondent of the Mailtons Mercury says:—After the late heavy rains, the weather still kept an unsettled appearance, and on Sunday sev. ral slight showers fell. In the evening we were visited with a thunder-storm, a most unusual circumstance w: this period of the season. The thunder-storm soon passed over, and was accompanied by a most extraordinary phenomenon—a lunar rainbow of unusual brilliancy. Monday was fine, but rather warm during the middle part of the day, some of the clouds hovering over the horizon having a decidedly rainy appearance; a little rain also fell this afterance. The Corton Exminition.—The exhibition of specimens of cotton grown in this district, which in consequence of the unfavourable weather had been postponed from the time originally appointed, was held on Thursday, at the Northumberland Hotel. The cause, however, which dictated the postponement still prevailing, neither the attendance nor the show could be expected to be very large; and several growers were unable, we understand, to attend or to bring their samples. The display was, nevertheless, gratifying. There were in all eight specimers. [FROM OUR CORMENFAMENT.]

(DUR NEW ROADS.—There cannot be two opinions about the wonderful talent which the officials of the present day bring to bear upon the various and multifarious undertakings which are set on foot pro bono public. But if there is one thing more than another which is calculated to bring down lasting honour and renown on the inventor, it is the happy application of the new system of road-making which is carried out in this part of her Majesty's dominional yelept New Englard. I had occasion to travel towards—not to, for under the new system there is one thing very certain, that no man can tell beforehand how far he may be able to go when as starts on a journey—as I said, I had occasion to travel towards Glen Innes, and managed to reach as far as Bem Lomond, midway between Armidale and the former place, when I ascertained that Beardy Creek, some eight miles to the southward of Gien Innes, was improvable. I also ascertained that if I made all haste to return to Falconer, a distance of ten miles, that I might reach it the same night, but assuredly not if I remained till the following day. I accordingly forthwith started on my return journey, reaching the river at that place about sundown, and found trat it had risen some three feet since I had croseed it in the morning. But how was I to get over: To be sure there was a sapling stuck in the ground on either side, not at right angles to the river, but obliquely. These I afterwards heard were intended to indicate that the crossing-place was in that immediate neighbourhood, but whether the wayfarer should cross at the upper or lower side there was nothing to tell, and as ill-luck would have it I decided on crossing at the lower side of the mark, and found at once that I had gone out of my depth—a fact, by the way, which many of us are frequently in the habit of doing—and after some difficulty, and an unlimited amount of ducking and diving in the swollen stream, I managed to get myself across, and a boy that was with me. Next day I cried

I made a final attempt to reach Armidale, and this time succeeded in crossing Tilbuster Creek by the new line.

Now, why the Government or their subordinates should take the trouble of expending heaps of money in forming causeways that always are impussable in wet weather, and leave a creek which, at a trifling expense, could be bridged over so as to form an unbroken link of communication, is to me and to every loody I have spoken to on the subject, a mystery. It cannot be on the score of economy, for as I crossed Tilbuster Creek I saw that the force of the torrent had torn away about one half of the crossing, leaving it, in my opinion, more dangerous than ever. Had a bridge, however, been thrown over the creek, passing through Tilbuster paddock, either in the paddock or immediately outside of it, the advantage gained would be this—that the traveller would find no more swollen streams to cross, whereas, even should the luckless wayfarer manage to cross at the Tilbuster crossing-place, he would still have two other streams to cross before reaching the foot of the mountains. Again, I am told that the new line is decidedly the longest, leaving out of the question slitogether the little fact that it is most decidedly the worst. What object, then, could our officials have in view? Not to display any engineering ability, I take it. To my mind the whole of the new line night be described as a snare to entrap unwary traveliers. All that appears to have been done was to make a straight line, root up trees, and half fill up the stump holes; so that at every dozon paces or so one finds his horses suddenly sinking into a hole, and himsels.

and himself (and herse, too) making fearful convortions a la Ducrow, to the imminent tick of the lives of both animals.

I have been conjuring my brains with the view to discover why all these man-traps have been made, and the only volution that I can arrive at is that the work was undertaken for the benefit of the unemployed. If so, then, the idea was not a bad one. For as sure as plums are plums the men on this line will always have to be employed mending the repairs. If the same system is being adopted on all the other thoroughfares, the people of this colony must entertain unbounded respect for the inventor of so happy and original an idea.

Well, if we are to have this system maintained. I would take the liberty of throwing out a few hints, which would not entail much additional expense—the trouble, of course, to the efficials would be a secondary consideration. And, imprimis, at every crossing-place lwhere posts are placed to indicate a crossing, I would suggest that the posts be measured and marked in legible figures to indicate the depth of the torrent. By this means a traveller would at once see whether it would be safe or not to attempt crossing. Secondly, I would suggest that there be at each crossing-place some board or mark to indicate on which side of the post a crossing should be effected; for, generally speaking, on all these creeks, it will be found that immediately below the made crossing-place of the depth of water is much greater, and the risk to like proportionately increased. And, lastly, I would suggest, where practicable, a bridge should be made inatead of a causeway: the former ensures a continuous link in the road; whilst the other is only passable when there are no freshes in the creeks, and then they are scarcely required, for if there be no water flowing, travellers can readily cross at almost any point.

If these hints do not meet with approval, then I would sougest that at these causeways a board be at almost any point.

If these hints do not meet with approval, then I would suggest that at these causeways a board be erected, and that there be written on it, "The heat place to get drouned in times of flood;" and doubtless people once aware of the fact will not be alow to avail themselves of the advantages thus held out to them by those in authority over us.

Accust 14.—By the arrival of the constable from the M'Donald River, to-day, I learn that two young men named Charles Finance and Thomas Fry, both aged about 15 years, were drowned on Monday last, on that part of the M'Donald River known as the Branch, by the upacting of a cance in which they were seated. Their bodies were found yesterday. A magisterial equiry will be held to-morrow, after which I may probably be able to send you further particulars.

Our weather locks still ominous. To-day, several heavy showers have fallen, and nimbi still hover around. This continues to do much harm all over the district; much wheat seed has rotted, and I hear the water still covers many cultivated fields.

The creeks have attained their usual level, though it would be little rain would soon rise them again, as all the lends in the neighbourhood are so saturated with water. WOLLOMBI.

BRIGGANE, AGUET 14.—The prorogation took place yesterday, at twelve o'clock. As the weather was very fine a large number of spectators assembled, both outside and inside the Council Chamber, to witness the exemony. His Excellency was escorted by a party of mounted rifles, and a guard of honour, consisting of a detachment of the 12th regiment, and two companies of Brisbane rifles, were drawn up to receive him before the entrance of the chamber. There was, however, no band, and the want of that great adjunct to imposing military display was cridently feir. Before leaving, his Excellency stood up in his castinge and thanked the volunteers, in the name of the Gueen, for their attendance, at the same time complimenting them on their soldierly appearance. Having been conducted to his chair by the President of the Council, and the Assembly having been unmoned after the usual fashion, his Excellency delivered the following speech:—
Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,—
The many important matters submitted for your consideration having now been disposed of, I am cnabled to release you from your attendance in Parliament.

As at present advised, I believe that the month of April in each year will be the most convenient period for the commencement of the annual assion.

It is most gratifying to find that your behours during the last three months have resulted in the completion of several measures of the highest interest and importance to this community. It has been truly said that the passing of the Real Property Act alone would in these have been sufficient to mark the reasion of 1951 as second to near that are likely to succeed in in contributing to the welfare of the octony.

The Audit Act, the Masters and Servants' Act, the Municipalities' Amendment Act, and the Acts previating for the Establishment of Eavings' Banks, for the proper Femour of Land, for the Manager Banks, for the proper Femour of Land, for the Manager Banks, for the proper Femour of Land, for the Manager and Charitable Institutions, to prove to the iriends of Queensland in the neighbouring colonies and in the mether commity the large amount of practical legislation which you have achieved.

The accounts received from our Emigration Commissioner in England, show that Queensland is already an object of prest interest as a field or actionment for intending emigratio, and that an influx of capital and population in the United Kingdom has already commenced under the Berni regulations which you have established.

Since I last addressed you, the settlement of Port Demison and of the District of Kennedy, had made good progress. Licenses have already been granted for the occupation of many three thousand square miles in that district, which was thrown open to settlement so recently as in the month of March of this year. The rapid extension of pastoral enterprise, in many cases by capitaliats from other Australian colonies, will necessitate the proclamation, at an early dote of a new district to the weatward, the capabilities of which promise to be of the highest order. At the same time, the surveys of agricultural land, open for selection upon casy terms, are kept steadily in advance of the demond.

The additional facilities and encouragement which you have offered to the cultivation of cotton are likely to produce inportant reasils during the present season, and the enquires now being made in England as to the propects of this seato

MARTH PARTY

A preliminary meeting is to be held at South Bristone to-morrow evening, for the purpose of considering the propriety of petitioning the Governor to erect the above portion of the town into a separate municipality, or to adopt such other measures as may be deemed expedient to ensure a siar proportion of the municipal revenue being apent in South Brisbane.

The following paragraph from the "Supreme Court I Journal," as the Course has been termed, from its incessant advocacy of the Judge's claims, will show the course his Honor intends to take in reference to the Supreme Court Act and the resolutions affecting him passed by both Houses:—

We understand that by this mail two documents will be sent home by Mr. Justice Lutwyche, both having reference to his position in the colony. The one consists of a petition to the Queen, purping her Majesty to disallow the Supreme Court Bill, on the grounds that he just and equitally rights of future Judges are not secured, and that the Legislative Ansembly is iffeguily constituted. The other document is a memorial to the Duke of Newcashle, as Socretary of State for the Colonies, in reference to the sixth of the series of recolations lately passed by both Houses of the Legislative, with regard to his conduct as Judge of the Supreme Court. This colonies have been also as a suprement with the part of his conduction of the court of the Court. The following extact will give an idea of the course intended to be followed by the two expeditions from this colony; but it is necessary to remember that a large discretion will be allowed to the leaders to vary it if they shall see occasion.

The party litted out by this government will be under the leaders to vary it if they shall see occasion.

The late rainy weather has been severely felt in the interior, where, owing to the difficulty of transit, flour in some places had risen to a fabulous price. Fears were also beginning to be entertained for the result of the ensuing lambing. Fortunately, however, the weather is now fine, and if it continue so for some time longer we may expect a prosperous lambing season since the great quantity of mosesure will insure an abundance of spring feed.

The Yerra Yarra will convey the English mail for transmission by the Benares, as it is doubtful if the Telegraph will be in time. The necessity for closing the mail here so long before the date of the mail steamer's departure from Sydney, which frequently stices as in the present case, is very much complained of, especially by the mercantile portion of the community. With the object of doing away with this inconvenience the Postmaster-General has submitted a proposal to A. S. N. Company to have one of their vessels, always despatched from this place with the mails at the latest period that will insure their arrival in Sydney in time for the outgoing monthly steamer. It is probable that the offer will be accepted, as the company have frequently gone out of their way to afford us the accommod tion sought without any subsidy. If the proposal of the Postmaster-General be entertained, and the Telegraph be despatched to carry out the arrangement by the present mail, it is probable that vessel may also bring us the mails by the Salseste, which vessel, I observe, had arrived at King George's Sound.

The following notice, re-establishing the remittance system of immigration, with the importunt alteration of a reduction in the kanount of the deposits for adults, has been published in the Gazette.

His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, directs it to be notified that, from the present date, the resultance system of immigration, as recently in farce in this colony, is re-established, with the one alternation mentioned below; and that deposits by way of remittances will at once be received by the Immigration Agent in Fankance, and all the sub-agents throughout the colony. As formerly, a deposit of £2 only will be required towards the passage of any immigrant between one and twelve years of age, but a uniform rate of £4 will be sufficient in all rates when the age of the immigrant shall be more than twelve and not exceed sixty years.

Mr. Evirumonus has at least reasoned his seat for the more than twelve and not exceed sixty years.

Mr. Fitrimmons has at last resigned his seat for the district of Port Curtis. In his address to the electors he complains that he had been unable to obtain that justice for their district which its importance deserves, and states his opinion that this will not be obtained until it sends more than one member to the Legislature. He advises the electors to choose as his successor a gentleman of well established principles, as it is probable, he says, that some wild political theories may be started next seasion. Mr. John Douglas, late member in the New South Wales Assembly for Camden, and Mr. W. H. Walsh, of Wide Bay, are spoken of as candidates for the vacant seat, but nothing certain on the subject is known as yet.

After soors weeks' duiness, we have again satisfactory reports from the Forest Creek reefs. The White Horse Guily Reef is yielding well, one party having had a dividend of 200 per man for their week's work. On the Little Bendigo Reef, a lot of ten tons of stone from one of the claims produced 35 ozs, of gold. Thirty tons of stone from Wattle Guily produced 40 ozs., and the last crushing from the Nintrod Reef was expected to produce somewhere about 300 ozs. Ozo bucketful of the quartz sent this time to the mill was estimated to contain 35 or 40 ozs.

Adverting to the operations of the Victorian Accilimatisation Society, the Arypur remarks:—Our beautiful climate, which, until yesterday, expended its blessings on little else than marsuphias and gumtrees, is now beginning to find more genial work to do in the nourishment of the most beautiful and valuable productions of the vegetable and animal kingdoms from all quarters of the globe. How much is implied and promised in this brief sentence from the report read at the meeting of the society the other day:—"The thrush, skylark, blackbird, and probably the stailing, may now be considered pernamently established among us, the three former being heard in all directions." Shough has already been effected in the way of acclimatisation to show that there is absolutely no limit to what may be done by combined action. The list of beasts, birds, and tishes "collected mainly for acclimatisation purposes," in the public garden of Meibourne, is as encouraging in respect of the animal world as are Dr. Mueller's annual list of exchanges in the world, we may hope, before the next generation has passed may, to see it utilized in the production and nurture of all the world possesses that is beautiful or useful in animal or well an except the production of main animal or vegetable the read of the passes of the s

It is also necessary to ascertain that no person is in legal occupation by a teut license, miner's right, or otherwise, of the ground applied for, and also that such ground is not likely to be required for mining purposes. It is evident, were these regulations not to be observed, that endless confusion would arise, as several occupation license would be granted for the same area of ground, or prior rights be invaded. Each occupation license issued not only plainly describes the portion of land for which it is granted, but on the back of the document is a small tracing, showing its exact position.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

The mail steamer Balcluths brings us papers from Adelaide to the 10th instant.

The Observer of that date states that a rumour, circulated very generally on Thursday, to the effect that intelligence had been received of Mr. Stuart's return with his party into the settled districts of the Far North. We have seen Mr. Canmbers (it adds) on the subject, and find from him that the report is evidently quite without foundation. It seems to have been brought into town by a person named Charles Hydess, who was formerly in Mr. Chambers' employ. He arrived in Adelaide on Wednesday night, from Mr. Herbert Hughes' station, near Crystal Brook, where he heard that a traveller who passed on Sunday, had mentioned Mr. Staart's having returned in asfetty with his party to one of Mr. Chambers' out stations (Oratungo or Moolooloo). It would have been impossible for such a person to have accomplished the distance between either of those stations and Mr. Hughes', about 200 miles, in less than four or five days, so that any news he brought from them could scarcely have been later than July 30 or 31, and Mr. Chambers has received letters from Mr. Finks by the last mail, dated from Moolooloo on the 2nd of August, in which no mention whatever is med of Mr. Stuart's return. In connection with Mr. Stuart and his party, we may state that inspector Hamilton has instructed him to send them on to Adelaide.

The Volchyers Force.—Thursday's Gasette con-

Hamilton has instructed him to be a laide.

THE VOLCKTEER FORCE.—Thursday's Gesette contains a return showing the number of volunteers enrolled in the colony to the last of July, 1861. From the return we find that the total force on that date consisted of 1724 members of all ranks. These were made up as follows:—Privates, 1512: corporals, or bombardiers, 54; sergeants, 71; farrier-major, 1; sergeant-majors, 3; veterinary surgeon, 1; surgeon, 1; lieutenants, 45; esptains, 31; captain and adjutant, 1; majors, 2; lieutenant-colonel, 1: total, 1724.

RAVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.—The Treasurer yesterday laid on the table of the House of Assembly the revenue and expenditure returns of the colony for the quarter and year ended the 30th June, 1861. From this document, we find that the total revenue for the quarter was £173,307 2s. 9d., and for the year, £553,603 17s. 4d. The quarter's receipts were made up as follows:—Sales of Crown lands, £77,241 8s.; Customs, £30,312 9s. 4d.; Mayine Board, £409 8s. 5d.; rents (Crown lands £19,955 4s. 8d., ordinary £281 10s.), £20,236 14s. 8d.; assessments, £576 8s. 4d.; licenses, £2693 9s. 6d.; postages, £4152 3s. 9d.; fines, fees, and forfeitures, £3765 5s. 11sl.; sales of Government property, £169 6s. 8d.; reimbursements in aid, £3229 9s. 9d.; miscellaneous receipts, £572 3s. 7d.; interest, exchange, &c. £1079 17s. 9d.; railways, £25,610 14s.; Port Elliott and Goolwa Tramway, £495 5s. 7d.; telegraphs, £1852 4s. 2d.; Adelaide water rates, £1046 3s. 1d. Total, £173,307 2s. 9d. This total shows an increase upon the quarter of £73,552 2s. 8d. Considerably more than half of the increase is upon land sales alone.—S. A. Register.

BURKE REURE EXPENTION—Mr. John M'Kinlay, stores are increase upon the quarter of £73,552 2s. 3d. Considerably more than half of the increase is upon land sales alone.—S. A. Register.

Burke Relief Experitor.—Mr. John M'Kinlay, accompanied by the Commissioner of Crown Lands and Immigration, and inspector Hamilton, attended at the John Bull Yards, Currie-attent, for the purpose of selecting men and horses for the Burke Relief Expedition. A large number of horses were offered, and of these 26 of the most suitable were selected. There were fifty-four applications from persons desirous of joining the expedition, and after the men had marched before Mr. M'Kinlay, he chose the following feur:—Messra. Bell, Poole, Middleton, and Kirby. Besides these, the expedition will comprise two others, one of whom will be appointed by the Government, and the other will come round from Melbourne. Two camels and one mare have arrived in the Occar for the expedition.—Observer, 10th August.

Filiam Wayrau.—On the 26th ultimo (says the South Australian Register), the House of Assembly appointed a commission of five gentlemen, qualified by their chemical knowledge and professional engagements, "to investigate the process by which Mr. Neale extracts the salt from salt water, to give it a practical test on a large scale, and to report upon the utility of the discovery; also, as to whe her it would be of great heachif to the inhabitants of this colony to make the discovery public." In the event of the Gommission reparting favourably of the process, and supposing that the discovery will be of great practical benefit to the inhabitants of this colony to make it public, and thus to place the benefits of the discovery will be of great practical benefit to the inhabitants of this colony to make it public, and thus to place the benefits of the discovery will be of great practical benefit to the inhabitants of this colony. When the resolution of the Gommission, was confirmed. The reports of analyses to ade by Mesers Bruco and Parkinson are sufficient to justify further enquiry, and to a NON-ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

Sin,—Knowing your columns are ever open for admission of public complaints, I beg to request the insertion of the following.

Our great grievance is the disgraceful fact, that the inhabitants of the town and district of Tenterfield are suffering very materially from the son-administration of Justice, There is but one magistrate (the Gold Commissioner excepted) in the district, and he will not sit. The law is virtually set at defance, and this state of things has been allowed to exist for a lengthened period.

With the terrible events recently enacted at Lambing Flat, and all its "riot and disorder" before their eyes, it is strange the Executive do not remedy this state of things here.

We have a commodious court-house and lock-up, C.P.S., and police staff, which the public are taxed to support, and yet the administration of justice is allowed to be in state quo.

The C.P.S. refuses to issue any more summonates, either eyes to to do, dragging people to the office day after day to be told the Court is adjourned because no magistrates are in attendance. And the ecople are, as a mainter of cours, highly indignant at such instruction to heir requirements.

Justice is demanded, let justice be given.

Surely the Ministry could select some perons to act as magistrate; if the person petitioned for by the people is not approved of, then let another be selected.

Hoping this may have an effect in the proper quarter,

I remain, your most obedient servant,

To the Editor of the Heraid.

Sta,—Having been gazetical, in a report in your issue of the 13th instant, as a member of a committee appointed at a recent meeting in "Sydney to carry out a resolution to present a testimonial to the Rev. Dr. Mackay, and being thus virtually represented as concurring in the estimate of that gentleman's colonial career, which, according to statements made at the meeting, the proposed testimonial is interfied to express, i feel called upon to state that I wholly dissent from that estimate, having been constrained to edopt views dismertically opposed to it, and that I cannot, therefore, set on the committee, or take any part in promoting the object of its appointment.

Mr. Alexander Campbell having stared to the meeting that "all the names on the list." of members of committee which he submitted to it, "he had been autaorised to put down," it is proper I should add that recently, in a conversation I held with Mr. Campbell, I was led to remark that, not withstanding my strong disappreval of a very large portion of Dr. Mackay's ecclesistical proceedings, his present position excited my sympathy, and that, if an attempt were made to raise a relief fund for his benefit, I would contribute towards it. The raising of such a fund, however, is a very different thing from the presenting of the proposed testimonial. By taking near in the contribute towards it. The raising of such a fund, however, is a very different thing from the presenting of the proposed testimonial. By taking part in the former I should express a sympathy which I feel, but by taking part in the latter, I should testify my approval of what I strongly condemn, and thus at once contradict my convictions, and compromise my principles. This difference between what I said I was willing to do, andwhat I am now asked to do, did not, it appears, occur to Mr. Campbell, and he, therefore, concluded that I would act on the committee which he proposed. I am, Sir, yours, &c., WILLIAM MINTYRE.

811.—By inserting the following extracts of letters just received from Mare, you will gratify those friends who kindly contributed to the Mare Famine Fund, in answer to Mr. Jones' letter. There being an opportunity of sending almost direct through the kindness of the charterers of the schoener Copuette to visit the Islands of Wostera Polynosia for scientific purposes, the kind offer was thankfully accepted, and the moneys received from Victoria, South Australia, and New South Wales, amounting to upwards of $50, was expended in navy biscuit, rice, and two barrels of beef, which I have no doubt will cheer the hearts of those habouring for the good of the distressed natives. The Coquette sailed on the 6th instant, and will probably be at Mare in about a month from that time.

MY HOLIDAY.

MY HOLIDAY.

[Prom the bystemy Mail, August 17.]

"Ana you a free selector?" asked Farrell, and thereby rudely awakened me from my fancied dream of freedom from politics, and ruthlessly brought me back to the quantiones versite of days of drudgery, and toil, and diagust. I need hardly say that I paused to recover breath before I replied, and then that I answered cautiously, for I did not yet know into what political circle I had fallen, or whether our host was red-hot conservative, pregressive liberal, or ultra radical, and said:—

"It seems to be fashionable now-a-days, and one might as well be cut of the world as out of the fashion."

"Yes, that's just it. A parcel of fools get up a fashion."

"Yes, that's just it. A parcel of fools get up a Gy, which they don't know the meaning of, and then others, knowing as little as themselves, join 'em, whil they make such a din, that sober serious brains are muddled and moidered, and can't get a chance to think."
"Then you don't believe in free selection?" I saked.

are mucidled and moidered, and can't get a chance to think."

"Then you don't believe in free selection?" I saked.

"Believe in it! Ha! ha! ha!" and he laughed boisterously for a couple of minutes. "Well that is good!"

"Come, come," I responded, "laughter is no answer, and there are very many sensible men who go in for the principle." That was a bit of Macquarie-street for him.

"Principle!" he ejaculated; "yes, it's their interest to go in for the principal."—he was actually perpetrating a joke. "But now, do you really fancy that anyone of them seriously believes in it?"

"Of course, I do!" I answered unhesitatingly, for I remembered the virtuous indignation, the patriotic warmth of Kobertson, and the wild, the rambling, or ishe obscure advocacy of many another hon. gent.

"Ha! ha!" he roared, "you are an innocent, and no mistake. Do you think, now, that John Robertson believes in it?"

"I have no cause to doubt it," I replied; "for has he not laboured and toiled, and roared and danced, and torn his beard, and all to establish—"

"What he knows to be a humbug." Farrell was ill-mannered, and interrupted me when I was preparing to be cloquent. "Look here, I've known John Robertson since he was a lad, and I know that he has teiled and worked and drudged the same as all us settlers have had to do, and has known as well as we have how difficult it is to make the two ends meet. Now, look at me. Here I am on a bit of land of my own. I have cattle of my own to milk or to kill; I have plenty of pigs and poultry; I could keep two, three, or even four teams of horses continually on the road, let alone bullook teams, and yet you see my land—there isn't the third of it cultivated—and I am within easy reach of Sydney."

"That's exactly what I want to get to the bottom of the work of the server of the se of it cultivates—and Bydney.

"That's exactly what I want to get to the bottom of. Why don't you cultivate?" I asked eagerly.

"For a very simple reason,—it don't pay."

But surely you might grow your own wheat; as much as you would require for your own consumption."

cheaper rate than I can grow wheat, even on my own ground."

"I can hardly think that," said I.

"It's a fact all the same. I've totted it up, and know that taking the price of the seed, with the cost of labour in ploughing, sowing, harrowing, weeding, reaping, carting, threshing, and grinding the flour I should get would cost me much more than I can buy it for in Sydney, although the land is my own. And mind you, here I leave out of sight the chances of losing the crop by hot winds—an occurrence by no means unfrequent."

I was staggered, but not beat yet, so I tried another tack. "Some of those who advocate free selection propose to sid the farmer by imposing a tax upon articles imported—in fact, by protective duties."

"Protective duties—destructive duties they mean," he answered, in an evident tone of ill temper. "How the deuce can they possibly protect me if they make me raise my own wheat at a higher cost than I can buy it now. If the wheat costs me a shilling a bushel to raise it more than I can buy it for in Sydney, and I use a hundred bashels a year, I shall consider that I am robbed of a hundred shillings a year by their protection."

"But then the small farmer will be able to clap on

I use a hundred bushels a year, I shall consider that I am robbed of a hundred shillings a year by their protection."

"But then the small farmer will be able to clap on the price at which he sells, and so get a market that he hasn't got now." I confess I was fast getting out of my depth, but I recollected luckily some of the electioneering protective harangues that I had listened to from one gentleman, who has at last, after a great many rebuffs, succeeded in finding a seat.

"Yes," asid Farrell, "and so victimise some one else in the community. But only see how this sets. Suppose you put a tax on everything imported that comes into competition with anything made here; the result is that all producers are protected in so far as their own article of production is concerned, but are victimised by being made to pay more than before for every article that they do not themselves produce. The man who produces nothing, has to pay more for everything, and of course claps it on his dealings to cover increased cost, and so everything is dearer, mobody a bit the better off, and very many a great deal the worse off, for the producer of the one single article who may be led to fancy himself protected will be the greatest sufferer, and will soon find that, instead of protection, they have given him destruction."

"Then it would seem by your account that it would be impossible for a man to live on a piece of ground of his own?" I couldn't keep on the Protection question; it was beyond me, I confess it, and was only too gled to get him back to the land and the farm, in which I fondly believed that the three sessions, the four recesses, the two general elections, and the innumerable public meetings that I have before referred to, had tolerably well posted me up.

"On a piece of ground, certainly not." He said this most decidedly. "If I was to try to live off this "On a piece of ground, certainly not." He said this most decidedly. "If I was to try to live off this piece of ground, I should make a mess of it." "And do you mean to say you couldn't live off this land?"

"And do you mean to say you couldn't live off this hand?"

"It all depends upon what you call living. I suppose I could grow enough potatoes here, and catch fish enough from the rocks to give us our tucker. That might do for a blackfellow, but would hardly suit me," and here he gave a jolly laugh and passed his hand coaxingly over the abdominal regions. "But to live as I now do, and to have something to spare to live as I now do, and to have something to spare for a friend or for a passing stranger, it couldn't be for a friend or for a passing stranger, it couldn't be done."

"But why?" I thought that was the shortest way of coming to it, for he seemed to me to be always darting from the real point to which I wished to bring him.

"Because it costs too much to raise the articles that will command a market, to say nothing of the expense of preparing them for and bringing them to the market. To be sure there's hay. That will always sell, because people who keep horses must feed them, and hay is too cumbersome to carry far; but only let that run up to anything like a price and we have it sent in from the other colonies."

"Surely we ought to grow it as cheap as they Surely we ought to grow it as cheap as they sent in from the other colonies."

"Surely we ought to grow it as cheap as they can," I answered.

"And so we do, by the acre but not by the ton; and this very article of hay is an excellent example of what I mean. So long as the seasons are good and the supply plentiful, the hay keeps at a reasonable figure and none is imported, but let a hard year come, early hot winds to parch it up or late rains to throw it down or rot it, and then up goes the price and in comes the hay from other places that have not been affected in this way. They can always sell cheaper than us, because they get heavier crops, and are more certain of them than we are."

"That is the reason, I should imagine, that you would give for the more regular supply of wheat that is reised in Adelaide as compared with New South Wales."

"Yes, that and the fact that the poor devils have bought their land, have laid out on it all they possessed in the world, and are compelled to work the ground, or to turn to something else and begin the world afresh. But, blees you, they don't make much more than their tucker out of it, after all the outlay they have gone to; and though some of 'em may have made money in the gold days, that's all over now."

"I don't know," I put in dubiously. "Sever to bought their land, have laid out on it all they possessed in the world, and are compelled to work the ground, or to turn to something else and begin the world afresh. But, bless you, they don't make much more than their tucker out of it, after all the outlay they have gone to; and though some of 'em may have made money in the gold days, that's all over now."

"I don't know," I put in dubiously. "Severt to ten shillings a bushel, the price at which wheat has been ranging for some time past, seems to me to be a paying figure."

"Bot would'be if they got it, but they don't. Why, bless your innocence, you're not half awake. Did you never notice that just before the harvest wheat always takes a fall, very gradual and very comfortable. Now, what do you think that's for? You don't know, well, I'll tell you. Suppose a free selectionist to elt down on a piece of ground, and to get in a good patch of wheat, by the time his twenty or thirty acres are in; if he has not got a very long purse, he will be presty well run out of funds; very possibly, for it isn't got in for nothing, he may be in debt. However, suppose he can weather out the harvest, there is the cost of harvesting, threahing, and preparing, for and carrying to market; suppose he can find can for all this without borrowing. He won't be able to heave his wheat lying in his barn, waiting for a rise in the market, but must sall at cance; and the millies know it, and have the price down, ready for him; keeping its down, down, steadily, until they fancy that all they it took them. He planted to see our fun of candleing. So of course I took them. He planted to see up flashing its down, down, steadily, until they fancy that all they with the cach, which I took care to keep flashing its down, down, steadily, until they fancy that all they waited to see our fun of candleing. So of course I took them. He planted to have the price down, ready for him; keeping its down, down, steadily, until they fancy that all they are likely to get has come in, when, presto! up goes the price again. And that's the way they work it."

"Then, if a man can hold on, he can get a good price," I saked, hopefully, for there seemed to be a chance for free selection after all.

"Yes, if his crop isn't cut up with a hot wind, or rested with the wet, or smutted with fungus, or pinched up with the drought. But in nine cases out of ten, the small settlers, the stringy barkers, as we used to call them, have their crops mortgaged as soon as they show through the ground, stlling at the harvest market price, and taking an advance, either from a miller or storek-eper, each of whom knows how to work the matter to his own advantage."

"It etrakes me, nowever, even on your own showing, that you, who could afford to wait for the higher price, might very well grow your own wheat." It thought I had him here, but he managed to slip away from me.

"No. I shouldn't saxe on, the price of the west."

"It etrikes me, however, even on your own showing, that you, who could afford to wait for the higher price, might very well grow your own wheat." I thought I had him here, but he managed to slip away from me.

"No. I shouldn't save on the price of the year round, for I always lay in my stock when flour is low. And, besides, to grow for market, I shouldn't make enough in the year to cover the wear and tear of temper that it would entail. It is so hard to get good men. I never got one yet. You have to take anything in the shape of a man to help you, and then just as you break him in and make him useful off he goes to turn his knowledge to account somewhere else. Only about three weeks ago I hired a man in Sydney, and asked him particularly, 'Can you plough?' 'Oh yes,' says he, 'Of course I can,' Well, I brought him out here, and gave him my own horse to ride upon, whilst I walked home. The next morning, I sent him with the two horses into the paddock to go on with the ploughing that I had begundeck to go on with the ploughing that I had begundeck to go on with the ploughing that I had begunded him to be suffered in the ground, and then there had been a struggle to get it cut, leaving a hole as if a stump had been taken from it; and then again another place would be just skimmed over not three inches of the soil being disturbed. I was riled and no mistake, I waited till he came down to the head land, and then I said to him, 'What kind of ploughing?' Yes, what kind of ploughing?' I repeated. 'Why, ain't it good enough for you?' he answered. 'Good enough for you?' he answered. 'Good enough for me?' I cried, for I was certainly losing my temper, 'it's not fit for anything!' 'Well' said he in the coolest manner possible, 'you'd better do it saids, and the sudden jerk broke one of the still he in the coolest manner possible, 'you'd better do it saids, and the sudden jerk the skillion now, just where he tied it when he came in."

But, 'said I, "this has scarcely a bearing on the question, because free selection is intended to give the poor man' a chance, and he will be hardly likely to employ labour." I was almost ashamed to bring up the "poor man," who has been so frightfully paraded of late in the aforesaid sessions, elections, &c., but I was getting fast driven into a corner, and was obliged to take up this, the trump card of the suit.

"Poor man! My grandmother!" he was really getting wrathy. "What in the name of common sense would a poor man do on a piece of land, even if he got it for nothing? How is he to clear and fence it, especially if it is a bit of heavily timbered brush land, the only really valuable land in the coloxy? And, above all, how is he to keep himself out of the clutches of sharking storekeepers and dealers, and to lay by for a good price for his produce? When I tell you that I, who am well off, can't make cultivation pay, how is a poor devil, with nothing but his own stout heart and strong arms to help him to do so?"

"He may, however, graw enough for the subsistence, of himself and family and so be independent."

"He may; but if a bad season should come, and I can remember many such, during the forty years of my life, in which nothing would grow, he and his family would be left to stave. No, it requires money, and a pretty good lot of it, too, to cultivate with any success, and then it is a very precarious investment."

If that is the case, I now rejoined, "I wonder at your cultivating at all."

"Why, you see, I must have some kind of food for my horses and 'milkers when feed runs short in the bush, and so for them I grow sorghum and barley. And then the horses want a feed of corn now and then, and the poultry require to be fed, so I grow a bit of maize; and these, with a considerable deal of self-denial in the first instance."

"This may word for it," he answered, "that it will never do. There are many things that he can't do without that he can't grow remember to have seen all, every acre, under cultivation; and see what they are now—all overgrown with couch, turned into pasture, or left to lie idle and neglected, the fences broken down; the barns falling in, and the threshing floors rotting. And why is this; Only because the proceeds of cultivation won't bear the cost of labour. When we had Government men here, and the work was done by assigned servants whose labour cost nothing, cultivation paid well enough. And mind you, I am only pointing to this to show the correctness of my argument, and not with any fondness for those days which, thank goodness, have now passed for very.
But you see hew the thing worked. When transportation ceased, and assigned servants gradually obtained their liberty, the great proprietors found by degrees that they could not afford to pay for labour; so, bit by bit, they gave up cultivation, until now the majority of their estates are comparatively untilled."

"There is something in this, no doubt," I observed; but you will scarcely say that land is valueless, and that a living is not to be got off it."

"No, I don't pretend to go so far as that," he replied. "Look at me. I grow no more than I re-

that a living is not to be got off it."

"No, I don't pretend to go so far as that," he replied. "Look at me. I grow no more than I require to feed the animals I make use of. I have a good herd of cattle, and they turn me out a tidy amount of butter every week. Then there are my pigs and my poultry, all furnishing good marketable commodities, and not requiring the employment of labour to anything like the extent that cultivation would do. In fact, I keep myself to that which I can produce with the least possible employment of labour, so that all I require my own family can very nearly do?"

"But surely the free selector may do the same thing?"

seems to keep on as hard as ever. I think we'll give up candicing for to-night."

A DUEL AT BERLIX.—The New Prussian Gazelts gives the following account of a duel between M. de Manteufiel and M. Twesten:—"We are able to give the following details of the duel which took place on Monday last near Potsdam. The adversaries were Major-General Baron de Manteufiel, chief of the Military Cabinet of the King, and M. Twesten, counsellor of the Tribunal of Berlin, and son of the theological professor at the university of the same city. There recently appeared at Berlin an anonymous brochure, entitled 'That which may yet save us.' In this pamphlet the Military Cabinet is vigorously attacked. M. de Manteufiel is depicted as a man who views military appointments exclusively from the Court point of view, and who for some time past has been a complete stranger to the army. Caprices and nepotism were spoken of, and M. de Manteufiel was compared to 'Count Grunne, of Vienns, who in Italy gave over the command of the army to Count Guilay; and it was asked if a battle of Solferino was equally necessary for us 'to remove this fatal man from his fatal position. M. de Manteufiel heard that this brockure was the work of Counsellor Twesten, and wrote to sak him if he was the author. The reply was in the affirmative, and the latter gave the reasons why he considered the maintenance in office of M. de Manteufiel dangerous to the State. M. de Manteufiel demanded a public retractation, which M. de Twesten redued, offering, however, to give satisfaction of another kind. Thus prevoked, M. de Manteufiel demanded a devery attempt to effect a reconciliation, and a very moderate declaration was drawn up. M. Twesten read it and declared that it was impossible he could subscribe to it. The principals were then placed; M. Twesten advanced immediately three paces, fired, and the ball of his pistol whizzed close by the eyes of M. de Manteufiel. The latter advanced three paces, raised his arm, and said, 'Throughout this affair you have conducted yourse martial against General Manteuffel, and the Minister of Justice to prosecute M. Twesten.

Public Official Lipe at Naples.—A Naples letter says:—"What shall I say to you of a city where the enervating influence of the summer is so severely felt? Naples at the present moment is all saleep. A day or two since, about nine o'clock in the morning, Count de San Martino went to the office of Public Instruction, but found no one there, all the offices being empty. After some time he met a man, from whom he inquired what had become of all the clerks. 'The clerks I'replied the man, 'they will be here in an hour or two. I came here before my time because I was tired with loltering at the café.' This was the answer given with a laugh to the Count de San Martino, who at such an hour of the morning certainly expected to see a Neapolitan Administration at work. He then left, saying to the man, 'Be kind enough to announce to the Secretary-General, when he shall have risen, that Count de San Martino, the King's Lieutmant, has called to pay him a visit.' The surprise of the mu may be conceived.''

James Brown, a blacksmith, at Dageaham, Essex, died the other day, having starved himself under the delusion that God had ferbidden him to est, or to drink beer.

DREAD FOR THE BUSH.—Bread for the Palaco.—B BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER, recommended by the Quren's private baker, and used by the army and navy, is the only effective substitute for yeast, in raising bread. The process of using it is so simple, and its operations o quick, that the most inexperienced may, by its aid, convert four into light tea cakes in a few minutes. In making puddings and pastry, it saves at least half the usual quantity of eggs and butter, rendering them both wholessome and delicious. It will keep for years.

Families, schools, and large establishments, where bread and other four food is extensively consumed, should use E. wick's baking powder, with the directions given by the Queen's private baker, who holds it in the histonestics.

OF WATER-COLOUR PAINTINGS.

79. "Interior. Speke Hall, Lancashire."—J.
Neah. This artist is distinguished for his skill in the faithful, as well as the picturesque, delineation of old English architecture. The scene here represented as the interior of one of the "Mansions of England in the Olden Time;" the figures, in the costome of two centuries ago, are thoroughly natural and lite-like. The claborate carving and the quaint furniture of the period are represented with characteristic fidelity, and the management of the lights is also very masterly. In producing these effects body-colour is freely used.

masterly. In producing these effects body-colour is freely used.

80. "Evening."—E. Duncan. The scene is an Baglish landscape about half-an-hour after sunset, before the daylight has aitogether faded from the sky. In close juxtsposition with the moon which has just risen, an artificial light is placed in the window of the windmill, the association of the three lights producing a remarkable and quaint effect. The incharming softness of tone and delicacy in the treatment at this picture, rendering it one of the most attrative in the gallery. The works of this artist are much sought after and command very high prices.

strature of this picture, rendering it one of the most strature in the gallery. The works of this artist are much sought after and command very high prices.

81. "Sunset by the Sca shore."—De Wint. A mere sketch—a study of a purticular appearance of nature, evidently produced with great rapidity, and painted on the spet. A fishing boat and a few characteristic figures are introduced, and an immense expanse of sea is presented. The subject is treated very vigorously, and shows the hand of a master. In the opinion of Ruskin the sketches of De Wint "testify more accuracy of eye and experience of colour than exercise of thought; their turb of effect is often purchased at too great an expense by the less of all beauty of form, and of the higher refinements of colour."

82. "Flowers and Frait."—Mrs. Duffield. A very truthful study of roses and currants, scarcely, if at all, inferior to those of Bartholomew before-mentioned. The panting of the pottle and of the little antique vase is extremely pleasing.

83. "Corn field."—Dandson. The three pictures by this artist placed together in the gallery—the subjects being entirely different—exhibit remarkable versatility of genius. The corn field, which gives the picture, the shady lane and the bush-enclosed stream being no less conspictious features. A beautiful English landscape is presented in its most attractive garb. The great charm of the picture is the sense of pure warm sunshine, produced by the golden tints of the stacked corn, and the exquisite green of the foliage. There is unmistakeable depth in the hazel bushes across the stream; you feel the inclination to go nutting in them. The distunce and the gleaners introduced are quite unequal to the rest of the picture. The mode in which the lights are obtained is characteristic of the modern water-colour school in which so many devices are resorted to that in the old school would not have been considered permissible,—the lights being produced by the process before noticed—cutting out and illing in with light transparent resemblance of Davidson's landscapes to those of Linnell.

85. "Rocks at Hastings."—Davidson. In the two previous pictures the artist has shown his skill in the treatment of trees; in this there is hardly a trace of vegetation, the picture consisting of aky, water, and rugged cliffs. It is an a study of the latter object that its excellence consists, every line upon the massive rock being described with the most perfect caccuracy. The drawing of the sea and sky is evidently subordinated to the representation of the sliff, and the attention is so much absorbed with the foreible treatment of this, that but little notice is bestowed upon the other portions, though the cliff is necessarily displayed to greater advantage from its contrast with the distant rain cloud.

87. "Calais Pier."—Austin. One of the most

We have before noticed some much better examples of this master. The reputation which David Cox enjoys would not be inferred from this picture, which is a mere sheeth.

87. "Calais Pier."—Austin. One of the most charming little aketches in the gallery. The thin vapoury clouds, and also the light green of the water upon the low sandy beach, are represented with great delicacy and feeling. The drawing of the figures and beats in the foreground is likewise admirable.

88. "Moonlight on the Sweet Nile."—Warren. It is difficult to realise the effects presented in this picture; they have, however, often been described by travellers in Rypt. It is night on the banks of the Nile, and every object is bathed in an atmosphere of pale blueish green. The figures of the man and camel by the water upon which they cast deep shadows, and of those in the distance, and also the feeble glimmer of the stars, contribute to the sombes unearthly aspect of the scene. Although many may be disposed to doubt the reality of the representation, none can fail to schnowledge the impressiveness of the picture. It is essentially a poem, the feeling of the artist being very powerfully expressed. Mr. Warren is the President of the New Society of Water Colours.

89. "On the River Lynn, North Devon."—P. J. Naftel. This picture attracted a great deal of attention at the Exhibition of the Old Water Colour Bociety, and was known as "the Foxglove," from the minute and delicate painting of that flower in the fereground. It is in every respect a wonderful painting, abounding in bursts of exquisite daylight, and essentially true to nature in every teature, a great variety of foliage being introduced, but without the alightest confusion. It would be difficult to conceive of snything finer than the broken mosa-covered rocks in the foreground. The characteristics of Naftel's painting are "brilliancy, leve of colour, and daylight, and general care in execution." This picture has been materially altered by the painter since its exhibition in Londor, in the ope materially altered by the painter since its exhibition in London, in the opening up of a bit of distance in the foliage to the left of the picture.

90. "Landing Place—Dinas, Killarney."—Hardwicke. A soc ne well known to Irish tourists, painted with admirable freedom and boldness. The picture is not so good an example of this master as that previously noticed (No. 9), and is, moreover, seen to some disadvantage by the side of the highly-finished paintings just described.

91. "The Woodland Path."—Davidson. Another charming rural scene, beautifully described. The idea of density in the bushes is very foreibly conveyed; the lights playing on the ivy and also the ferns in the foreground are most delicately rendered. The various features are delineated with the most mainter fai hfulness, at the same time that there is a perfect subordination of all the parts of the picture.

92. "The Woodcutter."—Alfred Fripp. The chief characteristic of this painting is its extreme freedom of handling, amounting we might almost say to audacity. So broad a style could only be adopted by one who was a perfect master of the brush. The drawing and the poise of the figure are excellent. In its breadth of treatment a resemblance to Gainsborough's figures may be observed.

93. "The Close of Day."—David Cox. A picture evidently drawn to illustrate a peculiar effect of light and shade, the dark side of a high gabled cottage standing out against a partially obscured sky in the evening twilight, every object in the foreground being clad in sombre shade; the faint remaining light falling on the white blossoms of an eldercerry tree, which stand out in pleasant relief against the dark roof. Like all Cox's paintings, the subject is treated with great breadth and vigour, but it must be looked at aimply as a study of a particular effect.

94. "Nature—Windsor Forest."—S. Cook. This is a sketch, evidently painted from nature. The crispness of the vegetation, and the freedom in the treatment of the foliage, are very noticeable. Every stem and leaf ar warned by the portentous clouds of the thunderstors which is fast coming over. The working up of the clouds, which seem, as you look at them, to be in-motion, is a marvellous triumph of art; the per-spective drawing of the sheep, the purple distance and the glimpses of blue sky are all excellent; but and the glimpses of blue sky are all excellent; but these serve only as accessories to the grand effect—the presage of the coming store—which is an power-fully dejucted as almost to make one look out for shelter. The aubject is neasted with a vart amount of freedom, very much after the style of David Cox in his later works.

111. "Dominique."—Captain Perry. A very elever sketch by an amateur artist, who evidently studies under the old masters of the water-colour school.

112. "Port Stephens."—Conrad Martens. We have before noticed a picture by this artist, who was, we are informed, a pupit of Capley Fielding. The chief beauty of the picture consists in the distance which is very carefully painted, and exhibits a very thich is very carefully painted, and exhibits a very apply monnlight effect; the trees in the fore-ground ice, we think, heavy and oppressive. We are glad to neitude so accomplished a painter amongst our Aus-ration artists.

melade so accomplished a painter amongst our Australian ertiets.

98. "Pass of Lianberris."—Maplostone. A very vigorous representation of a romantic scene. The distance on the road, and the vegetation upon the lotty mountains, glow in the genial sunshine. The actual quality of the atmosphere is also very fine.

99. "Cartie."—H. B. Willis. Every one must recognise the truthfulnesss and beauty of this picture. The drawing, as well as the rich brown tones of the cattle, is thoroughly lifelike; the landscape too will repay the most careful examination. This artist has a very high reputation as a painter, in oil, of cattle subjects.

caure, is thoroughly lifelike; the landscape too will repay the most careful examination. This artist has a very high reputation as a painter, in oil, of cuttle subjects.

10. "Church Interior."—Scandrett. An interior prettily displaying the effects of light and shade, but decidedly mediocre in point of ment.

101, "The Ford—liftets of Light and Shade."—Austin. A pleasing study of the effect of light upon toliage—the trees not being, however, very distinctive in their character. The cart and the figures crossing the first fere well drawn.

102, "The Screes—Wast Water—Cumberland Lakes."—W. Evans. Though this picture has a strange appearance, it is a correct rendering of a singular but well known view on the banks of one of the Cumberland Lakes. The red formation on the side of the cliff is, we believe, the material from which the ruddle (red chalk) used in marking sheep is obtained. The peculiar treament adopted in this picture gives it a somewhat smeared and wordly appearance; it should not, therefore, be looked at too near. The rain cloud, and also the reflections on the water, are well described.

103. "The Field of Waterloo,"—Gastineaux. There is little in this picture to call up the sentiment with which the recollections of Waterloo are associated; it only shows the three lofty but unimposing monuments erected over the classic spot. The sunset is effectively rendered, but out of such materials as the artist as selected, it would have been difficult to make an impressive picture.

104. "The Larder."—J. Hardy, jun. A composition of dead game, fruit, and other esculents, carefully drawn and nacely painted.

105. "Homeward Wending."—Maulestone. An admirable study of sunset, the sombre shades in which the sky is enveloped, serving to bring out very vividly the somewhat too violent yellow with which the departing sun lights up the western horizon. The treatment of the subject is no less powerful and impressive than the scenes before noticed by the same master.

106. "Australian Scene,"—Mrs. D. Scott. It is gratif side of the works of the first English watercolur painters; and still more so when, as in this case, the picture is by an amsteur and a lady. Taking these circumstances into consideration this "Australian Scene" must be assigned a good position in the gallery. There is a great amount of freedom in the drawing, and the creepers which hang in graceful festoors from the trees in the foreground are beau-tifully treated.

dawing, and the creepers which hang in graceful festoons from the trees in the foreground are beautifully treated.

107. "Study."—George Lance. Visitors to the English galleries are familiar with the excellence of this artists' limitations of nature, his most favourite studies being fruit, flowers, and game, such as are here presented. For "truth, power, and harmonious wealth of colour "this picture could not be surpassed. Every feather of the duck is given with daguerreotypic fidelity, and the piece of tapestry is a wonderful bit of painting. The manipulation is extraordinary. It transpired not very long since that a confiderable portion of the admired Velasquez, the "Boar Hunt," in the National Gallery in London—whole groups of figures and the greater part of the landscape—were in resilty the work of Mr. Lance, who admitted, in his evidence before a parliamentary committee, that he had some twenty years previously "restored" the picture when parts of the original painting had pealed off the carvas!

109. "Charcoal Sketch."—Maplestone. A simple landscape, rendered with extreme freedom and vigour.

110. "Bolton Abbey."—Reight. This being a vigour.

110. "Bolton Abbey."—Bright. This being crayon drawing, is, perhaps, hardly admissible in gallery of water colours. The ahadows on the water see years well rendered, but the picture is by no mear so good an example as No. 27, by the same artist.

By a mistake in the report of the flour market in Saturday's issue, the miller's quotations were stated to be unaltered. It appears that they have lowered their rates £1 per ton, per ton; seconds, £15 per ton. In the report of the Sydney markets the prices were, how-ver, correctly given. The following is an abstract of the cargoes of the several vessels which have cleared from London and Liverpool, for the Port of Sydney, during the month of May, and have not yet prome disadvantage by the side of the highly-instabed paintings just described.

From Melbourne we have papers to the 14th instant. The Age says :-

Our dates from Adelaide are to the 10th instant. The Register gives the following report of the markets:—

The Flow Market since our last report has again been very quiet, and prices of last week scarcely maintained. We now quote-country brands aftom £12 los to £1 lbs, and town brands shout £13. The sales of the past week have been smaller than they have been for the last two or three weeks, and just sow we can see nothing to lead us to suppose that there is any likelihood of improvement at present.

Wheat has maintained its price very fairly during the week. The quantities of last week has, of course, occupied considerable time, and the district roads have hardly begun to feel the benefit of the present fine weather—both causes having, no doubt, a good deal to do with the small quantity offering. We continue to quote $5 7d. as the price for parcels at the port; and although at this moment one or two lots might be placed at that rate, we do not think that figure could be obtained for a very large parcel. In town, loads are bringing about $6 4d. Oats and sarriey keep steady at the same rates. Cape outs about is to a $d, and fine white about 4s 6d to $5 6d. Cape having, no about $6 5d. Oats and sarriey keep steady at the same rates. Cape outs about is to a $d, and fine white about 4s 6d to $5 6d. Cape having, no and are generally well supplied.

Cheese—could be about $6 6d to $5 6d. Cape having, no and are generally well supplied.

Cheese—could old searce, and worth fully $8 to $1d. but new, which is coming in now, is difficult to place, even at $6d.

Postones—Van Dienener's Land, which are the favourites, are for the moment run out, but now are expected daily. Colonial serverts the content of the $6d.

What is also quiet, there being little offerine. Parcels at the port are worth is rid, and loads in town about is 4d.

MAONITUDE OF THE EXHIBITION BUILDING OF 1862.—The Times of 3rd June states that a visit to the site of this proposed building is the best way to get a fair idea of the immense extent of the intended structure, and also of the rapidity with which it is being raised. A fortnight ago, and the surveyors were only marking out the ground, and a line of little sticks, of different colours, was the sole aid to tracing the plan of the building. Now all the concrete foundations have been laid and hardened, and the walls of the picture gallery are already some fifteen feet high. The first impression on entering the works is that you are in a hopground of coloses) proportions, so bare looks the flat enclosure, with its hundreds of scaffold polers, set in lines of such length that the furthest off seems a mere twig. Stray men are at work here and there removing gravel, or setting broad slabs of stone on little cubes of brickwork. There are really some 800 employed in all, but they are lost, and look as nothing in the wide enclosure. When all is in full operation, from 3000 to 3500 labourers will be required. The site of the domes is as yet only marked by sticks, with here and there solid square columns of brickwork and masonry let into the ground to carry the cast-from columns. The brickwork and masonry, also, on which the columns for the nave and transcept will rest, are also complete, and the great picture gallery, as we have said, is most rapidly advancing. There must be very many of our readers who have contemplated building improvements in some form or other, if only in the way of a little greenhouse, or an additional stall to the stable, and who can, therefore, understand what the builder's building to quantities, however, fall into utter insignificance when we come to look at the amount of materials required to complete the building for 1862. The foundations have already consumed 5000 tons of morete,
